

THE INTELLIGENCER.

Published Daily, Semi-Weekly and Weekly.

TERMS:
The Daily Intelligence is Delivered by Carriers in Wheeling and adjacent towns at 15 cents per week. By Mail, Postage Free in the United States.
Daily, One Year, $8 00
Daily, Six Months, 4 00
Daily, Three Months, 2 00
Daily, One Month, 65
Semi-Weekly, One Year, 2 50
Semi-Weekly, Six Months, 1 25
Weekly, One Year, 1 00
Weekly, Six Months, 50

Great reductions to Clubs. Send for sample copies and circulars. Address

FREW, CAMPBELL & HART,

PUBLISHERS.

Nos. 25 and 27 Fourteenth Street, WHEELING, W. VA.

[Entered as Second-Class Matter, July 21, 1888.]

The Intelligencer.

WHEELING, W. VA., JULY 21, 1888.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT, BENJAMIN HARRISON, OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, LEVI P. MORTON, OF NEW YORK.

TRULY we know not the day or the hour when death may come upon us.

In the death of E. P. Roe literature loses one of its brightest lights. Peace to the gentle man's ashes.

The loss by the destruction of county roads is no small item of the disaster. Happily this is a well distributed loss, and therefore the more easily borne.

WHEELING catches it in all sorts of ways, but it is never long before she lifts up her head again. The same applies to the region round about us. The sun always shines again.

CAPT. C. W. BATCHELOR makes some very sensible suggestions in his letter published to-day. Besides his interest in common with all Americans who prefer their country to any and all others, he represents a large investment in Wheeling which depends on the prosperity of our industries. If the products now made in Wheeling are hereafter to come, even in greater part, from abroad, no investment will be worth much that depends on the vitality of home industries.

They have just been hanging a man in North Carolina, and to make sure of getting out of him all there was in him they hanged him in public, several thousand persons looking on. Where there is a healthy public sentiment there are no public hangings. Any community could furnish a goodly number of persons willing to witness so ghastly a spectacle, but the best communities do not afford the ghoulish opportunities.

Mr. THURMAN is wanted at Atlanta to counteract the effect of Mr. Cleveland's Free Trade message and Mr. Mills' Free Trade bill. Mr. Thurman is not known as one of the Protectionists of the country, but it happens that his end of the ticket has no Free Trade message plastered over it. That is all. But Mr. Thurman stands on a platform which endorses the message of Mr. Cleveland and the bill of Mr. Mills.

This issue is made up, and nothing that Mr. Thurman can say at Atlanta or elsewhere can change it one jot. Fortunately, Republicans do not have to ask one end of their ticket to try to take the sting out of the other end. We can meet the opposition anywhere with any part of our ticket, and we are not afraid of anything in the enemy's arsenal.

Flood-Tide Death Traps.

The houses swept away by the flood of Thursday night were built, as many hundreds of our homes are, close down to the creek bank. Houses only a few feet back and a little higher up on the hillside escaped, some with little damage, some with no damage, according to their nearness to the stream.

The practice of building close to the water is common and has its advantages when everything goes smoothly. When the waters rise suddenly and come rushing down as they did on Thursday night—giving their wide-awake occupants no time to save themselves by flight, the location by the water side appears to be altogether one of disadvantage.

Surely there have been warnings enough to have some effect on those who may hereafter have occasion to build in the narrow gorges along our treacherous streams.

Their Amusing Antics.

Will somebody who knows kindly take the trouble to explain why it is notorious for a manufacturer to vote the Democratic ticket and dastardly for him to dare to change his vote to the other side? He is supposed to vote one way or the other according to his own view of things, which may change as parties change or as other conditions differ.

There was your Cousin John C. Calhoun—he was once a Protectionist and became a Free Trader and Nullifier. We have never heard of a Democratic organ raking him out of the grave to vilify. They have only praise for that kind of thing.

The Haven of the Flood.

The great flood of 1884, which inundated half of Wheeling, wrecked property on both sides of the river and left through the whole Ohio Valley a wake of destruction, was in an essential feature less terrible than that which suddenly burst out of the creeks on Thursday evening.

In the flood of 1884 two lives were lost in this neighborhood. By this latest visitation the loss of life is simply appalling. No such fatality has come upon this community since the Scioto-Lomas steamboat disaster, in which fifty-eight persons met their death, sympathy with the lost alive nothing. It is the living who suffer, and it is to these that the hearts of all the people will turn in tenderness.

The loss has been great beyond computation. It is shown in the vacant spaces where stood little homes, in the sweeping away of cattle, crops, fences and outbuildings, all which represent toil and hard earned savings.

It is not to be expected that all this will be made good, but those who have escaped will doubtless be glad to make a thank offering in the form of substantial aid to those who are in distress.

Something has already been done, and very promptly, but more remains to do. The best way to do it is through one central organization, so that the same ground may not be covered several times while other ground is not covered at all. There is no way to get better results from relief work.

Clap Trap About Free Whisky.

Philadelphia Press.

The Democratic organs continue their efforts to impose upon what they cannot fail to believe is the ignorance of their readers by the talk that the Republicans are in favor of free whisky. Their effort is to have it understood that the Republican platform demands free whisky. As everybody knows who knows anything, the Republican platform demands nothing of the kind. It favors "the entire repeal of the internal taxes rather than the surrender of any part of our protective system at the point of view of the whisky trusts and the agents of foreign manufacturers." The prohibition platform demands the abolition of internal taxes without condition.

In the talk about free whisky the Democrats are seeking to cover their own position on this tax. They have denounced it in their national platform as a war tax, and then they have loudly demanded that the war tax should be repealed. Their newspapers and their Congressmen have done this on all occasions. In the talk about the Democrats have repeatedly declared for the abolition of the entire internal revenue system, and Democratic newspapers which now talk with such flippancy and ignorance of free whisky were noisy in their praise for the war tax, and then they have loudly demanded that the war tax should be repealed. Their newspapers and their Congressmen have done this on all occasions. In the talk about the Democrats have repeatedly declared for the abolition of the entire internal revenue system, and Democratic newspapers which now talk with such flippancy and ignorance of free whisky were noisy in their praise for the war tax, and then they have loudly demanded that the war tax should be repealed. Their newspapers and their Congressmen have done this on all occasions.

The present fear of the Democratic party is not that whisky would be free, but that the whisky trusts may get hurt. These whisky trusts have been built up under the internal tax, and as they are among the trusts which the Sugar Trust—the Democratic party is championing, it objects to anything which is likely to injure the combine. It is a profitable source of campaign revenue for the Democrats, and they are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.

When it comes to the naked question of temperance the record of the Republican party presents a contrast with that of the Democratic party which renders sickly and ridiculous the Democratic clap-trap about free whisky. In this State, in New York, in New Jersey and other States Republican effort to restrict the liquor traffic has almost invariably met a practically solid Democratic opposition. The temperance legislation of the Republican Legislatures of New York and New Jersey has been vetoed by Democratic executives. All there are in these States which the people know, and the cheap clap-trap of demagogic newspapers will not change them.

The Democratic organs ought to try and be honest. They should tell the people the simple truth, that their party is the free whisky party, and that their present talk is merely to divert attention from the real issue, and to excuse the Democratic protection of the whisky trust.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

New York Tribune.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a Free Trade country. They adopt the policy of liberating their commerce. Others suggest that a Free Trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where a commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by Free Trade, then I am a Free Trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are Free Traders of that kind; that is, Free Traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government and economic ends extended. Senator Hoar, Democrat, of Texas. Senate Debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. Why Spangler Carle, Premier Mills, Mayor Spangler, and the rest of the Democratic party, who are under the strongest obligations to protect it for the boodle there is in it, just as they stood up and voted solidly for the Sugar Trust in the House the other day.